2 - Naval vessels in port

[redacted]
following vessels in the roadstead of the port of Novorossiysk:

Escort vessels [redacted]

and motor patrol vessel [redacted]

leaving port.

50X1-HUM

[redacted] in the port of Novorossiysk an unmarked escort vessel of 400-500 tons, not a late type, having little armament, and with 12 very tall radio masts placed one on the extreme forward end, one fore of the bridge, two at the extreme rear end, and the rest on the deckhouse aft of the bridge. The vessel was seen to leave and enter port many times.

Enclosure 1.

On 20 February 1960, navigating between Gibraltar and Cape De

Cape de Gata
(N 36-43, W 2-12)

Gata on a true course 75°, the operative's vessel was passed by the Soviet merchant vessel Uritskij, of 10,000 tons, which was making an estimated 15 knots.

The details noted by the Source were the booms on each of the five holds, and the radiotelegraphic antenna atop the mainmast which resembled the top of a fir tree (see sketch).

Enclosure 2

While sailing from Leghorn to Sidone, at 1950 GMT, in a position ~~100~~ 13.5 miles bearing 352° on Matapan:

(B-1) A supposedly Soviet motor fishing vessel was met which seemed suspicious because of the following facts.

(a) Very bright running lights, whose brightness was very close to that of ~~naval~~ naval vessels and unusual for fishing vessels.

(b) Weather and sea conditions which fully precluded the presence of ~~xxx~~ fishing vessels at sea.

(c) Fishing vessels are not usually seen in that area.

(d) The vessels ^{were} ~~was~~ moving fast (estimated 11 knots) and headed in the direction of Tunisia.
